

COUNTY ENGINEER PROTECTS ROADS

Maintenance Work on Highways Started on Rose Hill Drive.

TAR TREATMENT USED

Cracks Caused by Expanding of Concrete Given Attention.

Protection for Tulsa county roads for the purpose of the newly organized maintenance work which County Engineer Dan Patton has started on the Rose Hill highway leading out of the city and which will be continued over all of the roads in the vicinity.

"It is just a stitch in time," said Mr. Patton, "and it is better to have the work done now than to have it done later when it will be more expensive."

"There is a kind of construction which does not need proper maintenance, and this is particularly true of pavements. As many of our pavements have been ruined by lack of attention at the right time, and it is gratifying to see the commencement of the work of Tulsa county's splendid work already completed."

"Some of your citizens have expressed fears regarding what seemed to them to be defects in the pavement, but these fears exist only because of lack of sufficient information of especially to this class of construction."

"Concrete expands and contracts with extreme heat or cold in exactly the same ratio as steel, and provision has been made to take care of this peculiarity of the material. With the very best of mixtures and most careful placing of slabs, cracks will develop at the point of least resistance, but when these cracks appear they are so easily treated by pouring tar into the openings that there is absolutely no damage to the stability of the road."

"In the construction joints are placed where the work is stopped for any considerable time, but the best practice is to make as few joints as possible and allow the natural contraction to do the work. Cracks, if they locate these places and treat them with the proper material. This treatment is very inexpensive and when made at the proper time serves to correct apparent flaws."

"There are also spots where there may have been clay earth, or other substances in the mixture by mistake, such as pieces of wood, stones, sticks, etc., but this tar treatment cures defects of this character perfectly and they result in no damage whatever to the durability of the pavement."

"Tulsa county is certainly to be congratulated upon the carefulness and efficiency with which this work is being protected."

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—When Joseph Meyer learned that interested persons would give him a free trip home to Germany, he would not take a cent of money to pay a cost to his mother. Carefully packing his American first papers in his pocket for future use, he reported to the Swiss consul in Charleston, S. C., as a German and asked for free passage. He got it.

After visiting his old friends Meyer brought out his first American papers and asked the American embassy for a passport to return to his wife and two children, who await him in New York.

Meyer is still expecting that he will be a German and doesn't want to be sent to the United States. He was a German to get the trip.

AMERICANS NOT WELL EDUCATED

Rt. Rev. Shahan Says Our People Should Seek Knowledge.

Education and citizenship was the theme of the address given by the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, president of the Catholic University of America at the high school auditorium Monday evening.

"We are education for citizenship so important as now," declared Rev. Shahan, who described this education as taking place not only in the schools but on the street, in the office, on the farm, and in the great centers of industry and commerce.

A knowledge of American political and constitutional history was named by the speaker as one of the essentials of citizenship. "There was a time when the teaching of history has risen to so high and important an order as today," he said. "The great war itself was the result of the false concept of history taught in the German universities for the past 30 years." He deplored the number of anti-American text-books in circulation on the ground that there is nothing so dangerous as a bad textbook, not from the point of view of literature, but from the purpose with which such a book is written.

"If America is to participate in any large way in the problems of the world, our citizens must be equipped with a better knowledge of foreign nations and languages. We must also educate ourselves to understand the foreigners within our gates, those who know neither the language or the ideas of our nation."

An American's first duty was to learn what his duty to his country is, and then to perform it, according to Rev. Shahan. "In the past few years Americans have shown a tendency to devote themselves to their own affairs, and leave their citizenship responsibilities to their neighbors. It is important that any nation, especially a nation with such a government as ours, should devote itself to all the duties of citizenship. Power goes where liberty is exercised and the liberties themselves soon pass away when they are not exercised."

The history of education was defined as in reality the history of civilization, as the two principal subjects in education, reading and writing, run parallel with the progress of civilization. The great object of education, after all, is not the development of the individual mind but the forming of the citizen for his business and social duties. "At all times and in all nations the education of the people has been a supreme matter," said the speaker. "But it is of greatest importance in a democracy and in such a democracy as ours, where any one may be elevated to exercise the very highest gifts in the power of the nation to bestow."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS READY FOR POOR

Humane Officer Welch to Supply Needy With Many Treats

Nowhere is the air more filled with the Christmas atmosphere than at the office of the county humane agent, A. M. Welch. Already the provisions for distribution have been secured and are awaiting the time when they will be placed in baskets and delivered to the homes of the poor of the city.

Barrels and baskets of candy are already on hand. Brightly painted toys and dolls fill the room. Groceries, clothing, books and other things that will go to make some needy home joyous and happy on Christmas morning, are stored everywhere ready to fill more than 200 bushel baskets. Mr. Welch estimates the value of the contents of each basket to be between $3 and $10.

Committees in charge have completed all arrangements for the delivery and distribution of the gifts. All of the worthy poor of the city will be taken care of by the office, which means negro families as well as white ones. A careful check will be kept on all deliveries in order that there may be no duplications. Every day names of needy poor are being sent in to Mr. Welch, but with the funds being donated to the World's Empty Stocking fund, he believes that he will be able to provide a happy Christmas for every poor child in the city and a basket of good cheer for every needy family.
